Final-year students urged to apply for registration now

Students of an approved program leading to registration as a Chinese medicine practitioner can go online now to apply for registration before they graduate.

The online graduate application service at the Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency (AHPRA) website enables final year students to apply for registration four to six weeks before completing their course.

It aims to smooth the path from study to work in five simple steps and online applications are being called for now. All applicants are required to return some supporting documents to AHPRA by mail to complete the application.

Board Chair, Professor Charlie Xue, said students must select the division or divisions of the profession in which they will practise when making an application for general registration as a Chinese medicine practitioner.

The divisions of registration are: acupuncture, Chinese herbal medicine and Chinese herbal dispensing.

‘To be a registered Chinese medicine practitioner a graduate of an approved program of study must also meet the National Board’s registration requirements,’ Professor Xue said.

Registration standards that relate to the new graduate are:

- criminal history
- English language skills, and
- professional indemnity insurance.

‘Graduates need to be a registered health practitioner before they can start practising and are urged to go online and apply for registration four to six weeks before completing their course,’ Professor Xue said.

‘It is important that graduates read all the information about what documents must be sent to AHPRA in support of their application.’

There are five simple steps to graduate registration:

1. Students apply for registration four to six weeks before completing their program at Graduate applications on the AHPRA website.

2. Applicants fill out an online application (if eligible) or download an application form. All applications require some documents to be sent to AHPRA by mail to complete the application.
3. Education providers advise AHPRA when applicants are eligible to graduate.
4. AHPRA finalises assessment, confirms registration, publishes new graduates' names on the national register of practitioners and sends out registration certificates.
5. New graduates registered with the National Board are eligible to start work as soon as their name is published on the national register.
